839	WNMU	ALAS	1835	Creativity	Creative & fine Arts	Revise and Resubmit - Overall, there was not information contained in the packet to help me understand how this course fits into the "Creative and Fine Arts" category. It seemed like a "Humanities" course through much of the form: the main questions asked ("What is Truth?" "What is Justice" "How should we Live?") are very similar to what would be asked in a Philosophy course. Perhaps what those questions are being applied to is more in the fine arts/creative arts area, but there was not enough detail in the summary to make that assessment. Are these discussions about the 4 philosophical questions being consistently applied to fine arts or media arts? The included assignment, which was about making a TV pitch--not actually making a TV commercial--got us closer but still did

						not seem to fit Content Area VI. I would have passed this if it had been submitted in Content Area V. I suggest a revision of the summary in the communication, critical thinking, and social responsibility area to more clearly outline what kind of actual content will be studied in the class. The content of the course is unclear to me, but it seems like a better fit for Humanities. The assignment that was included doesn't explain what students are expected to do. The narratives discuss the essential skills but do not always clearly explain the activities the students will engage in. This is particularly true in the Communication narrative.
